God Save The King

THE BANFF SPRINGS HOTEL, probably the most celebrated of its kind on the continent, dates its history back into the beginnings of Banff as a national resort. The hotel was opened in 1887 and, in the long intervening years, has "grown up with the country." It bears no resemblance today to the original building, representing in its size and general appointments one of the marvels of modern hotel luxury.

From its dominating position at the head of the famous Valley of the Bow, where the rushing Spray joins the more stately stream, the Banff Springs Hotel presents from its many facets an unequalled view of the sportsman's or holiday-maker's mountain paradise.

On the cover of this menu, Walter J. Phillips, A.R.C.A., of Winnipeg, has caught in an original woodcut the majesty of the mountain peaks with which the splendid Banff Springs Hotel blends so well. The illustration is a notable example of the work of an Englishman who, coming to Canada in 1913, the year in which he first exhibited at the Royal Academy in London, has contributed many other striking works to Canadian art.
